The lyrics are from an Islamic Arabic nasheed for children and they repeat over and over again. If they ever leave Al Barakah school they have a hands on resource with all Arabic grammar in one place. Please share this page and resource if you ave found it useful iA. I want them to see that Qur'anic Arabic and the grammar I am teaching can be used to read short Arabic stories or understand songs which is more relevant at their age/stage. So here is the free pdf for the demonstrative pronoun worksheet. I think it will make a good visual resource for revision. The Arabic workbooks I've designed have been edited and there is a curriculum that is coming together now alhamdulillah. So reviewing is going to be a major theme for us this coming term iA. To help them see the different parts that make up present tense for each subject pronoun. It helps for them to see that they are using their knowledge of Arabic keywords to slowly translate English sentences. If they understand that they are capable of doing that - insha Allah unconsciously, they will look at new surahs and feel confident enough to translate from the Arabic text itself - by themselves. In prep for the 1st lesson back, I've created this Back to Madrasah Arabic Grammar revision sheet to help them review what was taught last year. I like to review previous knowledge with the girls before teaching anything new. Introducing the mini foldable book series for Arabic grammar review.
